The Constitutional Suspension of the Subscription Business.

The regular meeting of Council will be held this evening. We presume if the bridge at all. If it is their purpose to friends of the railroad subscriptions think themselves strong enough to carry their measures through the First Branch they will be promptly taken up for action in that body. With the avowed partisans of hese measures we do not hope that any suggestions of ours can have the slightest influence. We do hope, however, that live act does not allow the subscription the balance of power in that Branch is still with men who are not beyond the reach of appeals to reason, prudence and

We ask these gentlemen to consider first of all that they cannot now vote these subscriptions without direct violation of the supreme law of the State. The new Constitution which came into operation in August overrode and suspended the authority granted by and under legislative act to incur this proposed the road might not just as well cross by debt. The debt of the city is already the Bellaire bridge as on a bridge built greater than the limit fixed by the constitution. This proposed addition to it declarations by others, and the now could have been made if the corperation of Wheeling through its legal instrumentalities had made these subscriptions and ordered bonds to be issued, before the expending of our subscription on the line 22d of August. But not having taken of the road and the crossing at Bellaire are this step, the constitution interposes its parts of the W. & L. E. programme, and superior authority and the proceeding is that the long headed Joun W. Garrett of August. The only case where any debt | The friends of the Bridge ought to de in excess of 5 per cent on the tax basis mand the ALTMYRE Amendment of can be made by a municipal corporation nothing. is "where such corporation has already [i. e., before August 22, 1872] authorized its bonds to be issued." This the corporstion of Wheeling had not and has not yet done. That is the purpose of the ordinances pending before the First Branch. The Wheeling Register's argument that bonds have been authorized by the corporation because the people of the city mere quibble. In an abstract sense the inhabitants of a city are the corporation, just as the inhabitants of this country are the United States. But for all business and legal purposes it is the gov ernment created by the city charter that is the corporation. That govern ment is the legal representative of the people of the city. The people of the city, individually, cannot sue or be sued. It is the Council and executive officers that constitute the corporation with which constitutional and statutory provisions and legal processes deal. Nothing is done by a municipal corporation until it is done by the officers created by the charter to exercise the corporate powers conferred on the inhabitants. The wote of the people merely invested the legal corporation with discretionary power to authorize an issue of bonds, and did not of itself authorize that issue. A legal act is not authorized so long as the authority is not complete. Unless the vote by the inhabitants of the city constituted of itself an actual and complete subscription to these railroads it is impossible that it could have authorized an issue of bonds for there had to be a debt before bonds could issued. And unless ponds could issue without further author ity, the issue was not authorized by that vote. Of course, we know bonds could not issue except upon legal enactment by Council, and of course it follows that of the Constitution and the oath of the members to obey its provisions, gentlemen ought to try and be consistent. They ought at least to conform their action to the legislation by virtue of which they claim to act. The act empowering this city to subscribe to the W. & L. E. Co. expressly requires, as we stated yester-day, that before the subscription is made the Company shall give to Council a guaranty that the road will terminate on this side of the river. Without such guaranty the subscription cannot be made. with this requirement: 1st, to build a bridge; 2d, to use the bridge at Bellaire. The Company have professed that it was their purpose to build a bridge; and the company tormed for that purpose has been held up to our people as their chosen agency through which it was to be done. To that work the Railroad Company has proposed to subscribe all that it might receive from this city and $100,000 beside, The amendment put into the Rallway ordinance by Mr. Attractin compels good faith in this work on the part of the Railway Company to the extent of our subscription to it; and the acceptance of this amendment is, as the matter stands, the only sort of guaranty the Com-

for the purpose. In view of similar apparent purpose of the W. & L. E.
